Response to Amendment

1. The reply filed on December 24, 2003 is not fully responsive to the prior Office Action because of the following omission(s) or matter(s): the amendments to the specification and to the claims are not in strict compliance with the revised version of 37 CFR 1.121(c) effective July 30, 2003.

First of all, the replacement paragraphs provided in the amendments to the specification are identified by bracketed paragraph numbers which are generally meaningless since the corresponding paragraphs in the originally filed specification are NOT so numbered; thus, it would be nearly impossible to determine with ease and certainty which paragraphs from the originally filed specification are being amended and replaced--the replacement paragraphs should instead be identified by corresponding page and beginning line numbers.

Second of all, only ONE listing of the claims must be provided; the claims listing appearing on page 8 of the instant reply is both incomplete and redundant and should NOT be provided in the replacement reply to the instant Office action.

Last but not least, deletions of five characters or less in the amendments to the claims must be enclosed in DOUBLE (and not single) brackets

A proper reply to the instant Office communication should be a replacement to the reply filed on December 24, 2003, and should include the amendments to the specification and to the claims only. Since the amendments to the abstract and to the drawings as presented in the instant reply ARE in proper form, these should not be resubmitted.
